1. BAYING THE CATITAL.

By 9 a.m. the distinguished party of ladles and gentlemen who were to form the excursion party were assembled at the depot, frought thither in carriagos and on foot, and soon thereafter an ample train of coaches, drawn by a trusty engine, whistled long and bestd, and the commany were greatly conloud, and the company were speeding over the rails of the Alexandria, Washington, and Georgetown road.

The train was placed at the disposal of Mr.

The train was placed at the disposal of Mr. McKenzie by Mossrs. Phelps and Stevens, the receivers, and locinded passenger, sleeping, smoking and refreshment cars.—all especially dedicated to the use of the guests.

The morning was breazy and scenewhat clouded, but anon the sun looked forth glad enough, and as the train screamed the passage of the Long bridge, and went bellowing into the precincts of the "sacred soil," the spirits of the party rose with the sun, and soon all were happy as a Maging party of n all were happy as a Maying party of Among those participating in the excursion

It was interesting to note the various expressions and occupations of the excursionists, among whom were grave and dignified sensors, solid and substantial representatives, observant and wide-awake correspondents, and last though by no means least, beautiful and enthusiastic ladies, who seemed all loyous, like school-grife released for a brief vacation. AT THE FUNCTION—A CHANGE OF CARS AND SUBSERY.

At about 10 a. m. the train, which was in charge of Col. Hays, the superintendent of the road, served on time sharp at the junction of the Alexandria, Weshington and Georgetown with the Alexandria, Loudon and Hampsher railroad, and a very few busy minutes, no the part of the road officials sufficed to transfer the excussionists to the comfortable and smooth-gliding coaches of the latter road, the train tening it waiting with steam up.
